

These are some of the comments received after our courses;

"If you'd told me at the start of the course that after six weeks I'd be able to give the sort of presentation I've just given, I wouldn't have believed you"

"Without exception all who completed the course (which includes me) feel that they have not only learned a lot about public speaking, but perhaps more importantly, have increased confidence in themselves in any situation that requires communication- in other words, every aspect of their working and personal lives.

I genuinely feel I have learned more from this course than any other I have attended, and a lot of that is due to how it is structured. The amount of doing involved, rather than simply reading or being told about it was a real strength."

"The seminars provided a valuable experience for our employees- improving their communication ability and confidence and developing their interpersonal skills."

"Robin is a very skilled presenter who nurtures confidence in his audience and helps them face their fears"

"We found the course participants improved remarkably during the course. They were attending specifically to improve their presentation to groups visiting the museum. I was delighted with the progress. It was pitched at just the right level to produce the best results from participants. I would recommend Robin Grieve as an excellent Speech Workshop Tutor. His ability, experience and achievements in speech making qualify him extremely well for running very effective training workshops."

Roger Mulvay
General Manager
The Kauri Museum

The training has helped staff prepare and structure their presentations, to carefully target their audiences, to be economic in their use of words, getting their message across early on in the presentation and reinforcing that message throughout the speech, and to have confidence in their own ability. The confidence when in a public forum goes much further than simply presenting a speech. It extends to generally appearing in public, to answering questions in a public forum, to assuming a leadership role in a debate, and to the person's general self confidence.
